

This invention relates to newly identified polynucleotides and interactions of these polynucleotides with polypeptides, and their production and uses, as well as their variants, agonists and antagonists, and their uses. In particular, in these and in other regards, the invention relates to polynucleotides used in identifying compounds that modulate the activity of prokaryotic ribosomes.